Talking to your child about online safety

Advice on how to start the conversation and get support if you're worried.

Starting a conversation about online safety

It can be difficult to know how to start talking to your child about what they're doing online or who they might be speaking to. But talking regularly, like you would about their day at school, will help your child feel relaxed and mean that when they do have any worries, they're more likely to come and speak to you. It can help to:

- reassure them that you're interested in their life, offline and online. Recognise that they'll be using the internet to research homework as well talking to their friends.
- ask your child to show you what they enjoy doing online or apps they're using so you can understand them.
- be positive but also open about anything you're worried about. You could say "I think this site's really good" or "I'm a little worried about things I've seen here."
- ask them if they're worried about anything, and let them know they can come to you.

Above is a screen shot of the NSPCC website that provides a wealth of information about keeping your children safe online, here at school we use the teacher section to support of lessons and assemblies. Please take a look at some of the resources they have I am sure they will be very useful to you.

PSHE

The last two weeks during PSHE and in PSHE assembly on Mondays for KS2 the children have been learning about ways to stay safe online, being 'Share Aware' and discrimination. Please take some time to talk to your child about what these words mean and if they can give you some examples of scenarios.
